Notes:

*=correct answer

1. By going back to the Start triangle it was possible to line up flag C with the westernmost crag.
2. A combination of compass bearing plus distance judgement from the decision point gave flag A.
3. Apologies for the poor visibility here. There were two flags on the boulder, south and east. East (C) was correct according to the control description.
4. Maybe the "saddle" description was unfamiliar, but both flags were well below the height of the saddle.
